One day, a heavy thunderstorm came into town. With a flash of lightning, someone knocked on the door. "Mother, I think we have a visitor." said Robert as he quickly opened the door. "Hello, I am just a passerby. I was wondering if I could find some shelter here. It started raining heavily all of a sudden." said the man. Robert and his mother welcomed the man in because they were always willing to help other people.

"You can use this room." said Robert as he showed the man one of the empty rooms.

After a week, the rainy season passed and the Sun was shining brightly. "Thank you for showing hospitality with food to eat. In return, I will give you a treasure map. Indeed, you will find a great treasure. Hahahaha." said Joe before he left. During this period of time, there were many pirates in England so false treasure maps were everywhere. Robert and his mother did not give much thought to the map, so they placed it somewhere in the basement. A year after Joe left, Robert accidentally discovered through the newspaper that Robert's mother opposed his decision, so he snuck out of his house and left on an adventure with his old friend Paul. Since Robert and Paul did not have a boat, they went to the captain of the ship that was anchored in the harbor of the village. The name of the captain of the ship was Oscar. Oscar had been left all alone after his trade business collapsed. He had parted with his crewmen as well. Robert and Paul spoke to Oscar about the treasure map. "Sir, I have a treasure map from the Victory. Let's go together and find the treasure." said Robert. Oscar agreed to this inviting offer.

All three of them began their journey together. They had a very favorable trip. Even the weather was helping them by blowing cool wind.

 (Listen Carefully : _____)

The three of them began to search around the island as soon as they got off the ship. "I think that treasure map is fake, Robert. We've found nothing so far. There are not even animals here." said Paul. "Let's hurry and find a place to sleep." said Oscar. They found a cozy cave. "We will spend the night here and try to find the treasure tomorrow. If we can't find it, let's go back home." said Paul to Robert, scared of what would happen to them. Suddenly, they saw something shining in the cave. "What is that?" said Robert. The three of them slowly got closer to the shining thing. The cave was filled with gold and precious stones. "Hurray!! It's the treasure! We've found the treasure!!"

On the next day, Paul and Robert woke up to find that Oscar, with his ship and the treasure, was gone. Oscar had betrayed them by leaving them on a deserted island. "Oh no! What should we do?" said Paul.

 (Listen Carefully : _____)

"What are you youngsters doing on a deserted island?" asked the English navies. As Paul and Robert explained, they learned that Oscar had stolen the treasure of the pirates. Paul and Robert began to chase Oscar with the English Fleet. Oscar was soon caught. All the treasure was taken by the English Fleet because all of the treasure was from the pirates who had stolen it from the citizens. Robert and Paul were taken home safely with the help of the English Fleet.
