I will explain how these and other teeth work using an example from real life.

(Listen Carefully : _____

That step, however, was only the first one. While canines tear off food, molars help you chew food. Molars are in the back of your mouth. These are the biggest teeth in your mouth. If you try to swallow a big chunk of meat, you risk choking.

"Be sure to chew the meat thoroughly," Mom advised as she saw some of us wolfing down the ribs quite quickly.

(Listen Carefully : _____

As I was eating, occasionally, some smaller pieces of meat come near my incisors. These are the flat teeth right at the front of your mouth.

(Listen Carefully : ____

I kept eating using my canines, molars and incisors until the entire rib was finished. I enjoyed it so much that I decided to repeat the process again.

"Can I have another rib?" I asked my father.
