Unit 01 Humans Need to Protect Tigers

UNIT 01

The tiger is one of the world's most well-known animals. Sadly, tigers are on the brink of extinction. In the past, nine types of tigers inhabited large parts of Asia. However, during the 1900s, three types became extinct. Now, the fourth type of tiger is likely extinct in the wild.

Tigers play a vital role in their habitats. They help maintain the balance between prey animals and forest vegetation. Without tigers, these animals would consume too many plants, causing problems for other creatures that rely on the vegetation for food and shelter.

Can you guess why they are disappearing? One reason is that companies sell tiger bodies for profit. Tiger body parts have been used in traditional Chinese medicine by some companies. Sellers can earn a lot of money by selling dead tigers to these companies. Selling tiger products has been against the law in China since 1993. And most countries around the world have banned the business of products using tiger parts. But some continue. Some of these sellers prioritize making money over protecting endangered species.

Another reason that tigers are disappearing is habitat destruction. People cut down the forest and change wild grassland into farmland to grow crops. As the wildlands disappear, the tigers have to live in small areas that are far apart from each other. When tiger habitats are destroyed, the animals that tigers eat have less land to live on, too. And people hunt those animals, so their numbers drop even more. Tigers have less wild food, so ★they sometimes have to come to the village where people live to attack farm animals. Farmers shoot tigers that they see attacking their animals.

People around the world are working hard to save tigers from becoming extinct. Governments protect tigers by stopping the tiger business. They also help by punishing illegal sellers. Conservation groups from many nations assist in countries where tigers live. They raise funds for tiger projects.

No one wants tigers to become extinct. But time is limited. What can you do? It may seem obvious, but we must prioritize protecting the tigers that are alive right now. Additionally, we need to preserve more tiger habitats. More guards must be hired to stop the sale of tiger parts and products. If people work together, these magnificent animals may be saved.
